

latimes.com/features/kids/readingroom/la-et-1010-corner,0,4115287.story

latimes.com

October 10, 2010

Creativity Corner

Sunflowers

Emily, 7

R.D. White Elementary

Glendale

Sunflowers are cute. Sunflowers are big and soft. I like sunflowers.

I Am Madeline

Madeline, 9

Carpenter Avenue Elementary

Studio City

I am a dancer who loves animals, dragons and art. I wonder if dragons even lived on Earth. I hear the cries of dragons cutting through the night, so shrill, so shrill. I see a pure black dragon with shiny scales, just waiting for me to take him home.

I want to become a professional dancer and be known all over the world.

I am a dancer who loves animals, dragons, and art. I pretend to be taller than I am right now. I feel that dragons should never have been killed, just because of their size. I touch the slick, black scales of a mysterious dragon, seen by no one but me.

I worry that mankind will die out because of all the wars going on. I weep when one of my family, or one of my pets dies.

I am a dancer who loves animals, dragons, and art. I understand that I will never have a dragon, that they are not real. I say that people shouldn't hurt animals for any purpose. I dream that I'm inside the story, Dragon Rider, riding a dragon of my own.

I try as hard as I can to do better in math.

I hope that all wars will end forever and people won't have to die defending our country.

I am a dancer who loves animals, dragons, and art.

I See Sadness

Helene, 11

Magic Pen Kids

advertisement

Corona del Mar

A blanket of black oil covers my beautiful blue home as I lick the oil off Larry's drenched feathers. Larry the Laughing Gull is my best friend. He used to always catch more fish than I did. But he would always share. Larry's quiet today. His laughter has turned to silence. I wait for his eye to blink— to tell me he's alive. It doesn't.

Copyright © 2010, Los Angeles Times